THE OLD FASHIONED TENOR.

BY T. C. HARBAUGH.

He wouldn't be classed with the tenors today, For the old fashioned music has floated away, And he is reposing 'neath sunshine and snow, And hushed are the ballads he sang long ago; What ballads they were and how plaintive each line! His wonderful singing we thought was divine; His garments were quaint and his heart it was true, And Jimmy, the Tenor, 'most every one knew.

He chanted at weddings, he sang at the bier, A song for the happy, a hymn for the tear; As straight as an arrow, as prim as a maid, He won every heart by the grace he display'd; The countryside listened, entranced by his strain, The village would call for the ballad again; And nobody whispered and nobody stirr'd So long as the voice of the singer was heard.

The critics who sit in the front of the show Would laugh at the singing of Jimmy, I know; They'd roast him today could he come to the fore And give us a taste of his singing once more; But critics were scarce when his triumphs were won,

And in the whole district he rivals had none; Whenever he warbled he captured the throng, For Jimmy, the Tenor, was master of song.

There's silence today where he sang in his might, And the old fashioned village seems robbed of its light;

But over the hills, where the shadows are dim, The birds in their beauty are singing to him. I listed in spite of the years that are gone For the ballads I heard in life's mystical dawn; They come from the past, where the dark waters roll, And Jimmy, the Tenor, sings still in my soul.

OUTWITTED.

BY JOSEPH TRUMANN.

Robert Kent sat idle in his little private office. He had the ledger lying open before him on the desk, and gave himself up to very unpleasant thoughts over the bad times which made it almost impossible for him to support his wife and children in the usual manner.

Two years before he had possessed, besides his elegantly furnished house in the best part of the city, a pretty villa on Long Island Sound, and now he had given up both and established himself modestly in a little house in Morrisania. During this period his balance in the bank had steadily decreased, and no longer amounted, as he had convinced himself just now, to a hundred dollars. His only hope of being able to keep himself above water lay now in his selling soon a row of building lots, which he had bought several years previous on speculation, at a comparatively low price. As he looked before him, racking his brains, his eye fell upon a photograph standing on his desk.

His face brightened somewhat; he drew the photograph nearer to him and let his mind stray back into the past. He recalled that night when, in a place not of the best repute, he saw for the first time, by the side of a large and handsome but half-intoxicated man, a very young and pretty girl, of faultless carriage, with a terrified countenance and wide open eyes—how he then, after their departure, had followed the two, and ascertained that they lived in a boarding house—how he, the next day, out of interest for the young girl, had also obtained board in the same place, and scarcely a week later had occasion to offer her not only consolation, but effective assistance, when she had been forsaken by her seducer, who had not kept his promise to marry her.

Robert Kent remembered exactly the day that he had brought her back to her parents in the little village in Connecticut, and induced them to forgive her, and how he then, at shorter and shorter intervals, had traveled over there, until he had finally made her his wife and brought her back with him to New York, where not one of his friends and acquaintances had even a suspicion of her not quite spotless former life. And in the consciousness with what love and fidelity she had thanked him for that which he had hitherto done for her; how she, so unlike many other women, felt happy only in her domestic sphere, although the best social circles were open to her, a contented smile played about his lips.

At that moment the door leading to the outer office opened, and his clerk called in:

"A gentleman wishes to see you, Mr. Kent."

The one addressed became a complete business man the next moment, and replied, closing the ledger:

"Very well, Mr. Shaw, let him come in."

The individual announced, who appeared in the private office a few seconds afterwards, had anything but the appearance of a gentleman. He wore no overcoat, though it was in the month of February, and the day very cold. The coat, which evidently had not been made for him, had already lost its original color, but showed innumerable spots, and was buttoned up to the neck, as if to conceal the absence of a vest; the trousers, covered with street dirt, terminated above the worn out shoes, which let the toes peep through in fringes. His hat looked as if it had lain for days in the gutter before it had been made use of again, and the part of the shirt collar one got a glimpse of had almost the same color as his face, which evidently had not come in contact with water and soap for a long time. His inflamed, watery eyes, under which were dark rings, and the trembling hands, as well as the penetrating odor of alcohol that came from his person, left no doubt as to the cause of his sinking so low.

Without waiting for an invitation he let himself drop heavily on a chair standing near the desk, and wiped his bloated, repulsive face with the remnant of a handkerchief, which looked rather like a rag that had been used recently for cleaning very dirty windows.

"The devil! Who are you, and what do you want here?" cried Kent, springing up furiously from his seat.

"I'm what's left of Fred Burrows," said the caller, with a hoarse laugh.

Kent's heart throbbed so violently that he was obliged to sit down again, and could scarcely force out the words:

"By God, I thought you were dead!"

"As you see, I'm still alive, to the joy of all my former friends," now came ironically from the lips of the tramp. "I don't look much like a Harvard graduate, do I?"

The broker made no answer, but his hand lying on the table began to tremble visibly.

"I arrived here only a week ago, and without a cent in my pocket," continued the other, now in a whining tone. "So I sought assistance of some of my old friends. But do you think they helped me? The devil take them all and every one—particularly Dick Stevenson—you know him? He even

Almost a quarter of an hour had passed before Robert Kent again entered his private office, and found his caller half asleep on his chair.

The broker had succeeded not only in selling his building lots, but at a price much better than he had dared hope; and, after the purchaser had gone, his troubled mind, relieved of one care, had determined upon a plan of dealing with the rascal of a tramp; but he seated himself quietly before his desk, and seemed to think over the situation, while Burrows stared at him with eager eyes.

"I will give you a hundred dollars," said Kent, finally. "Will that be enough to buy your silence?"

"Surely—until the money is spent," was the answer.

been overdrawn to the amount of fifteen dollars and fifty cents. Strange! I'll run over there myself and see what it means."

Scarcely ten minutes later Kent was holding an animated conversation with the president of the bank.

"My bank account was put in order yesterday morning," he concluded a rather long statement, "and I satisfied myself that I still had a small balance with you. Was any check from me presented in the course of the afternoon?"

"Yes; one for a hundred dollars; here it is."

The stock broker examined the check, apparently with the closest attention, and compared it with his check book. Then he said, handing it back, in a recover the greater part of the money from the forger, and am ready, in this case, out of consideration for his respectable relations, to stand the loss myself."

The bank president agreed to this proposition, and Robert Kent left, in company with Mr. Heathen.

Toward three o'clock the same afternoon Fred Burrows, decently clad, sat in the dining room of the Occidental Hotel, and ate with relish the meal before him, when the one at whose expense he was faring so well entered, and, after a hasty view of the room, at which there were at that time only a few guests, walked straight up to the table and seated himself opposite to him.

"Go on quietly with your meal," Kent whispered to him, "and listen attentively to what I have to say to you. Don't make a scene if you don't want to harm yourself."

"What is it?" said Burrows, crabbedly. "Fire away, old man!"

"Do you know that the police are looking for you for forgery?"

Knife and fork fell from Burrows' hands, and his face colored up.

"Forgery!" he stammered. "How—what? It can't be that they have tracked me as far as here?"

The broker's eyes shone. So this man already had something on his conscience similar to what he was accused of here!

"I don't know," he said. "This time it is a check for one hundred dollars on the Suburban Bank, which is pretended to be drawn by Robert Kent."

"But you signed it yourself!"

Kent smiled scornfully, while he looked straight into the face of the man sitting opposite to him.

"I know that," he said, "but I declared to the bank president and police magistrate that I didn't do it, and consequently a warrant was issued against you, which is already in the hands of a detective—don't interrupt me—my clerk knows that you were alone in my office for almost a quarter of an hour, and that it was possible for you to lay hands on my check book. Through your former friends—particularly Dick Stevenson—I am able to prove that you are a beggar, and that nothing else brought you to me. Ten years in prison are, in any case, sure for you—unless —"

He cut himself short.

"Unless what, you damned intruder?"

"Unless you leave the city at once, and take the six o'clock train on the Pennsylvania Road for Chicago. I myself will accompany you to Jersey City and make sure of your departure."

Burrows reflected a moment before he growled:

"I don't believe you. You only want to get rid of me in a convenient way, and are lying to me!"

"Hold! I will prove my words to you. The detective who has the warrant came here with me and is waiting in the reading room for my return. A sign from me and you are a prisoner! I will go now and get the warrant from him, to convince you."

Kent rose and went to the adjoining room, but returned in two minutes with an unfolded paper in his hand, which he held up before the eyes of the man who threatened the happiness of his home, at the same time asking:

"Shall I call in the detective?"

Burrows shrank, then said, in a trembling voice:

"I shall have to bow to your will; but I don't want to go to Chicago, for the ground is too hot for me there also. I'll go to St. Louis."

"And never come back here; if you do I shall see that you are arrested at once."

When, at six o'clock that afternoon, Fred Burrows sat in a car, with a ticket for St. Louis in his pocket, he called out of the window to the stock broker, who was waiting on the platform for the departure of the train:

"I really ought to owe you a grudge; but I won't. We two were on a war footing together, where all stratagem is permissible, and you outwitted me. Good bye!"

Robert Kent came home later than usual that evening, and his wife made as if to reprimand him for it. But he put his arm around her waist, and drew her to him with such great heartiness that she forgot the point. And now she learned why her husband had remained away so long this once.

JULIE OPP

Is a New York girl, her father being of German descent; her mother an American. A little over a year ago she was a journalist in this city, earning her living as a writer of special articles for the press. By the advice of Daniel Frohman she gave up journalism to try the stage. She was to have become a member of the Lyceum Theatre Company, but, while visiting England last summer, she was offered an engagement by George Alexander, to play some small parts and to act as understudy. This position Miss Opp was advised to accept. She appeared first in Mr. Alexander's production of "The Prisoner of Zenda," as one of the ladies of the court. Her intense study and application to her work won for her Mr. Alexander's confidence, and she next appeared in the poetical role of Hymen in the production of "As You Like It," and also acted as understudy for Julia Neilson, the leading lady of the St. James Theatre. She subsequently appeared as Mrs. Ware in the St. James production of "The Princess and the Butler." In this play she enacted the leading role for nearly a month upon Miss Neilson's temporary retirement from the company. Miss Opp is now playing Antoinette de Mauban, in "The Prisoner of Zenda," with Mr. Alexander, on tour in the English provinces, and she has been secured by Daniel Frohman to play her original part in "The Princess and the Butler" upon the production of that play at the Lyceum Theatre, in November, after which her engagement with George Alexander compels her to return to the St. James Theatre, London.

had me kicked out! Damn him! But at last, two days ago, I struck luck—I saw Alice again—the same Alice who, for almost six months, had been him, let's say—my intimate friend, and lived with me in that boarding house where you and I became acquainted years ago!" He leaned forward, and looked the broker impudently in the face.

"The same Alice, who, as I found out only last night, is now your wife, and of whom not a soul seems to know what she had been to me previously."

He took a check book from a drawer of the desk, filled out a check, seeming to bestow great care upon the signature, and then examined it a few seconds with a critical eye before he let the paper go out of his hands.

Burrows also looked at the check very carefully, and his face beamed with pleasure when he found it really called for a hundred dollars, and was made payable to the bearer.

"Enough of that! I can imagine now what brought you here. I will give you five dollars."

"Five dollars for not exposing Alice's past?" cried Burrows. "I demand at least five hundred on the spot!"

Kent again sprang up excitedly, and cried, with the open scissors in his hand:

"If you mention that name once more, by God, I'll kill you with the scissors as I would a dog! Now listen to me. I will give you fifty dollars and buy you a ticket for the West, say Chicago. That's all I can do for you. If you don't accept my offer, then, by heaven, I shall have you arrested for attempted blackmail!"

"Oh, no, I'm sure you won't do that!" sneered Burrows. "Think of the revenge I would take—the exposure!"

"Mr. Shaw," said Kent the following morning, approaching his clerk with an open letter in his hand, "why didn't you tell me yesterday forenoon, when you had entered the drawn checks in the bank account, that the latter was overdrawn?"

"Because it wasn't the case," replied the clerk.

"You still had a balance in your favor of eighty-four dollars and fifty cents."

"I don't understand that; I have just received this notice from the bank that my account has cool tone:

"I did not draw this check; it's a forgery. Please examine the signature carefully; it's pretty well imitated, but not mine."

"A forgery!"

The president compared the signature with Kent's flourish in a thick book, and thereupon called a clerk.

"Mr. Heathen, would you recognize the person who presented this check for payment yesterday afternoon?" he asked him.

"Without doubt; for his very shabby appearance struck me," was the answer. "But, as the check was made payable to the bearer, I cashed it without hesitation. He was a man of about forty, with the face of a toper."

"Do you think you can guess from this description who the man is?" asked the president, addressing the broker.

"I'm afraid I can," replied Kent, with a dejected air.

"All these characteristics fit a certain Frederick Burrows, who had a respectable position here four years ago. He has fallen very low, and now annoys former acquaintances. Yesterday morning he was in my office, and I gave him a trifle. Unfortunately, when he had been in my private office a little while, I was called out, and he seems to have made use of the few minutes he was alone to steal a blank check from my check book, which lay on the desk."

"Under these circumstances, I must beg you for an exact description of this man; I shall send immediately for a detective."

"Then you wish to prosecute the forger?"

"Of course, since you will hold us responsible for the payment of the check."

"Very well! I shall do all in my power to help you in the matter; but I should like to request you not to send for a detective, temporarily, but first of all, through Mr. Heathen, whom I will accompany, to swear out a warrant for the arrest of Burrows.

With this in your possession, I hope to be able to

GOLDEN GATE GLEANINGS.

"My Friend from India" Scores a Success—"Sue," "The Railroad of Love," "Rigoletto," "The Count of Monte Cristo," and Vaudeville All Draw Well.

[Special Dispatch to The New York Clipper.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 5.—The houses opened last night to good business. At the Baldwin Theatre "My Friend from India" began its engagement to a crowded house. It was well received, and is likely to do a big business.

MARINER'S opened to an enthusiastic house. W. J. Pascoe's new leading man at this house, made his first appearance in the title role and was well received.

COLUMBIA THEATRE.—"Sue" was produced last evening in the house by the Broadway Co., before a large audience. "The Railroad of Love" will alternate during the week.

FROM OTHER POINTS.

Clifford's Savoy, Chicago, Dedicated by "The Gay Matinee Girl"—David Henderson Secures the Great Northern Theatre, Chicago.

[Special Dispatches to The New York Clipper.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—Once again weather was favorable to the openings and business was in accordance. The man from Mexico was welcomed by a good house at the Columbia. Will Collier drawing out many laughs, and Eddie Foy Jr. and his wife, Sophie, in "Vicker's" was moderately well filled when the curtain rose on "The Paris Doll." Verona Jeanie was the centre of interest, but Allene Crater, Richie Ling, Charles Ladd and others were well received. A number of special notices....

Wardrobe.—Wardrobe, the musical comedy, had a grand opening at the Lincoln, and theatre made a pleasant impression on the crowd.

BEATTY.—Samuel Beatty, the burlesque star, opened his new piece, "The Burlesque Queen," at the Alhambra, and she made a hit with those who liked good singing. Eddie Hayes and Lytton, tacitly a strong hit, were more popular than ever at the Chicago Co.

Alcazar.—"French Flats" was presented here last night, to good business.

Tivoli.—"Theatricals," "Hesitation" was the attraction here last night, to the regulation bus business. "The Huguenots" will be the alternate opera.

Orpheum.—Alexio, O'Brien and Havel, and the Adelphi Trio are the headlines in this week's bill. The opening house was big.

Otto GLEISER closed with Price's Floating Opera at Mound City, Ill., Sept. 23, making his sixth season with the show. He will remain at his home, Dallas, until after the Dallas Fair, before starting out on the road again.

MASON AND FILBURN have received their new sketch, "A Jolly German," written for them by Geo. F. McCann.

DR. LOU FORREST'S LAUGH MAKERS have closed the summer season and will lay up for two weeks before reopening for the winter.

OUR AUSTRALIAN LETTER.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

MELBOURNE, Aug. 27, 1897.

VICTORIA.—After an unprofitable second season of nine weeks "The Sign of the Cross" is to be withdrawn from the Princess stage next Friday. On the following night the Pavilion-Stanley Comedy Company will open its second season with "Too Much Johnson." The same company plays for four weeks, then gives way to the English Company and "The Royal Divorce," for which some magnificent dresses are being prepared. "The Firm" has made considerable money lately. "The Sign of the Cross" matinee in aid of the Victoria Infant Asylum realized £147.

The Flying Jordans, shortly closed their season at the Phoenix. With the exception of two evenings business was so bad that Mr. Jordan must have lost a lot of money. The last nights were characterized by the appearance of the Three Cherry Sisters, billed as "The Three Angels of Music" in music halls. Their performance was, however, a "trotty" that critics came down heavily on the management. At the end of two weeks George Rignold took over the unexpired portion of the Jordans' lease. He opened to good housekeeping.

CHESTNUT STREET OPERA HOUSE.—The present week brings to a close the eight nights' engagement of "The Wedding Bell." At the hour of the final curtain three stars, Lillian Russell, Della Fox, and Jefferson Estelle, an excellent opera and clever principals and chorus as support, makes a commendable combination, which promises to bring good houses next week. The attraction was well received by the critics and public. Next week the Bostonians and, for the first time, "The Serendip."

CHERRY STREET THEATRE.—"The Girl from Paris" continues due to enormous business at this house and now enters upon the third week of its run. Next attraction, "One Round of Pleasure."

WALNUT STREET THEATRE.—For the current week Flo Wainwright and S. A. Ables' comic company will be introduced during the performance by Beanie Bonhoff. "The Whirl of the Town" opened with a big house last week, but business dropped off during the remaining fair attendance. Next week, Weston Larkayne, in his new romantic play, "The Royal Secret" Oct. 10, "A Ward of France."

PARK THEATRE.—The dramatization of Augusta C. Garfield's "Brotherhood" the Puritan, made by Estelle Clayton and entitled "The Puritan" will be produced at this house this week by Isabelle Evanson and Estelle Clayton and company.

DR. WILSON'S THEATRE.—"The Private Secretary" is still his acting manager.

At the end of the first four weeks he has substituted "The Private Secretary" for "Charles' Aunt." Business is still good at this house.

The Selbins, the clever "cyclists" have concluded their season at the Phoenix. They go to Sydney. To-morrow they visit the Hayters and Watsons. The Hayters, who are very popular, make their reappearance. The Avols, in their new and original vertical pole act; Tom Woottell, Emily Lyndale, Alan Hart, Poppy and Sykes, Will Whitburn, and the Almanac Singers are in the program.

Last week Harry Rickards returned from Europe. In a speech he told a large audience that he had secured a fifty years lease of the Opera House, which he intends to rebuild on the most modern principles. Also, that he had engaged the following artists: Pauline Viardot, Pauline Viardot, the juggler, Marie Lloyd, Marie Lotus, Peggy Pride, Florry West, Agnes Hasel, George Rohr, Richard Douglas, Paul Pelham, G. W. Hunter, Alex Hume (one of London's best young singers), George Beauchamp, Tom Costello, Austin Hart, Robert Forman and Fannan, Horace Wheatley, the Kellogg family, the Cartwrights, the Carpenters, the Kastellis, the Beauregarde, the Wicks, the Bentons, the tortionist; the Poinisks, the Sisters Conis, the Sisters Terry, Spy and Austin, the Hulines, musical clowns, from Drury Lane; the Neuski Troupe, Phillips and Loraine, the French Quadrille Company, the Miller Quartet, Paul Martinis, the Avols, the drama people include Charles Cartwright, Evelyn Lamb and Rattl Brown. Mr. Rickards also purchased the Australian rights of Charles Wyndham's "Prisoner" succeeds.

Professor Norton B. Smith, the horse educator and trainer, is touring the gold fields. He showed at Baltimore and Bendigo to good business.

Henriette Terry, the young lady, is a new soprano who has been winning laurels in the ornate "El." Her style is marked by fluency, certainty of attack and remarkable distinction of enunciation."

The Amherst Comedy Company, which includes Boston Noddy, one of England's best young singers;

Arthur Deane, a young baritone, and M. Szczepanski, a Polish pianist, will give two concerts in the Melbourne Palace Hall on Sept. 25 and 28.

Oiga Baker, while privately attending a Besseley Clayton back kick, broke one of her ribs.

Florence Eustice, Syria Lancome, and the 12-year-old South African, Ada Colley and Florry West, all Australian girls, have secured lucrative London engagements.

The Three Olfans, and Petrie and Elyne, who have concluded their engagement with The Flying Jordans, remain for the winter. Miss Elyne, who has been engaged with the Foster-Brown Company at present on tour, has given up her life.

Frank Lawton returns to America by the Moana. He will tour the States, and then go to London, and finally return to Australia with a company of his own.

NEW SOUTH WALES.—Lady Harry Rickards reopens the Arabian Nights-like Palace Theatre, Sydney, with a variety company, including Fanny Lidya, Fanny Wentworth, Bill Morris and Master Arthur. The show, which was a success last season, will be a success again. The Avols, a lively baritone, and Charles Howard, a local baritone, are the chief attraction.

The Flying Jordans last week was another winner at this house, the attendance being large every afternoon and evening. Henry E. Dixey remains for another week, and the other leaders of the week's bill, not equal to "El." The Amherst Comedy Company, which has been absent for some time, will be back again.

Mr. and Mrs. Williamson & Musgrave will take a leave of the London Shaftesbury Theatre, and will open in the Autumn with Kyrie Bellow and Mrs. Brown Potter. The arrangement with the Foster-Brown Company at present on tour, has given up her life.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kenton, of the "Trifles" will be here for the first week.

The Tivoli Company still includes Sellman and Moore, the Kentucky pianinies, the Allisons, Athas and Colins, and Lizzie Collins. Business is still good, the house being well filled.

Professor Bristol's Equestriques continue a profitable season at the Criterion this week and opens at the Birmingham Royal next week. Professor Tom Kennedy is still in charge.

Eroni's Circus Menagerie and Wild Beast Show opens at Wagga on Sept. 1.

The Elsie Adair testimonial entertainment presented $1,000 last Saturday. "The Referee," by which she was presented, was the best of the evening, and the amount given to a trust account for Miss Adair's own private and personal use, and a couple of trustees were appointed for the purpose. Miss Adair has received a letter from George Coppin to the effect that owing to her illness prevent her from giving an engagement, she has decided to abandon her Christmas pantomime at the Melbourne Royal.

The Emma Wangenheim Business Opera Company is at the Hotel Metropole here. The manager, Mr. J. H. Johnson, has been engaged to represent "Oliverette" and other comic operas, the Australian rights of which are held by "the firm." Last Tuesday the Pollard Opera Company commenced an eight weeks' season in Newcastle. Their first production is "In the Land of Oz," a short season in Sydney, then a tour of New Zealand.

Frank Lincoln, the English humorist, commenced 21 a week ago at the State's Tercentenary Hall. Bert Levy gave clever sketches of local celebrities.

The Harbourside opened their concert season at the Town Hall 21, to big business. John Lemmon, flautist, Blanche Thomas, soprano, and Mr. Sykes, organist, are in the company. They also played Newcastle one night.

At the Royal Magpie Moore is concluding her not too successful season with quick changes of programme. "Mrs. Quin's Twins" was followed by "Joanna," while this in turn was followed by "The Trifles" but the last week's attendance being fair.

Harriet and Laura Roberts are in the cast.

closely attended by one whom she supposed to be a cavalier. He was disguised as a tycoon, and his appearance, as it is, has only an appearance, firmly established her belief that she was born to royalty. She has occasion to call before her a workman in her employ, who had been engaged that morning. The visiting countess recognizes in him a former acquaintance, and in the course of the interview the fact is made apparent to both Eva and the workman, Peter, that the adventure of the masquerade had been between the two. Eva at first is furious and orders him to leave, Peter stily renew his love making of the night before, and Eva alternately implored by his pleading and rebuked and rebuked him four times in as many minutes. He is finally given permission to stay on trial. Two extremely comic characters are provided in the persons of Knight Hans Von Schwetzinger and Count Zeeck, two noblemen with nothing but their titles to live on. The knight has installed himself in the house of Gold Eva, through his flattering words to Barbara, the housekeeper. Later the count arrives in search of Schwetzinger, in order to secure a loan. He is richly attired, and the knight, thinking him in affluence, is about to strike him, when the fact dawns upon them that they are not quite on the same level. The other than his attire and his horse have been secured from a Jew on the possibility of his making a wealthy marriage, the money lender accompanying him as his valet, in order to be near him and the horse. Thus far he had failed in ensnaring an heiress, and he is just about to give up in despair when the knight encourages him with the prospect of a marriage with Frau Eva. At first he rebels against connecting his ancient name with one of the common people, but the vision of the widow's money helps him to overcome his scruples, and he consents. The marriage between Eva and the count was arranged for having been only too willing to enter the noble family of the Zecks. Peter has been ordered to make the wedding rings, but her eyes are opened later to the empty pretences of the count, and when, in the last act, Peter presents to her the wedding rings, with his own name engraved in the one intended for her, she immediately acknowledges the avowal and becomes his. Four new members of Mr. Connelly's stock were introduced to the American public in this play. Camilla Marbach appeared as Eva, and that character achieved success. She has large but extremely pleasant and attractive features, and is a most agreeable person in her parts. Bernard Vorwerc, tall and handsome, with a resonant voice, read his lines with power and acted with great skill. Edmund Hanno, the jolly bumbling knight, with no thought save that of quenching his thirst, was amusing, and Gustav Von Seyffertitz made a favorable impression as the count in search of the heiress. Wilhelmine Schlueter, who must have been highly gratified by her reception on her first entrance, contributed her usual careful work. Ruscha Michaels, as Ursel; Georg Le Bret, as Christof; Ely Collmer, as Friedl; and Agnes Burmester, as Countess Agnes, completed the cast. A number of new productions are under rehearsal and will be presented in their order. A season of comic opera will also be given.

MINER'S BOWERY THEATRE.—Irwin Brothers' burlesques is the attraction this week, and drew a good house Monday evening, Oct. 4. The performance starts in with an olio, composed of some strong numbers, and is topped off with a burlesque, enlisting the services of the company in producing an interesting mixture of comedy, music and feminine display. Oscar and Sellen Kherns are first on the bill in their German comedy sketch and seemed to give satisfaction; Jessie Woods and Bella Irving gave duets and negro imitations in harmonious voices; Dick Leggett, grotesque dancer, and various entertainers, and in the "Grown-Up" act was applauded; the Sisters Vainmore, singers and acrobatic dancers, proved to be nimble footed performers; Kilroy and Dawson, parody singers and repartee producers, caused laughter in plenty by their original material; the Harvey Sisters, Maude and Edith, came next in songs and dances, for which they were encored; Frederick Clarence's School Girls and Boys Quartet (Madeline Burdette, Jean Neville, Walter Stockwell and Jack Cranz) sang and gave character imitations with good effect; Rexo and Ascan contributed a musical comedy sketch; The Irvin Brothers' Burlesques then dispensed themselves in the burlesque. During its action Oscar Kherns as a German, and Guy Rawson as the Hibernian comedian, contributed good comedy work. The Five Demi-Virgins, the Hebrew Quartet, the Hebrew Ladies Quartet, the Four Pirates, the five Barrison Sisters, and a pretty ballet movement by the "Trio De Merots" proved interesting bits and all were encored. Fred Irwin is the director of the burlesques. Next week, The Night Owls.

THIRD AVENUE THEATRE.—"The Electrician," Charles E. Blaney's production, had its first New York presentation Monday evening, Oct. 4, to a well filled house. Its action deals with the persecution of Tom Edison by Kenneth Savage, who is jealous of the hero's success in making love to Edith Sessions, the banker's daughter. The plot in detail has been published in THE CLIPPER. Frank Karrington was sufficiently strong to Tom Edison, the electrician, and Harry Ford, while Arthur E. Sprague incurred the enmity of the entire house by his portrayal of the villainous Sprague. Will F. Phillips gave a breezy, but exaggerated, impersonation of the electrician, and the author of the piece, S. Stone looked and acted well as Edith, Emily Stone as Mary Toper and Helena Collier as Nellie contributed some interesting characters. The remainder of the cast was as follows: Bill Turner, P. A. Anderson; Robert Sessions, J. W. Howland; John R. Edison, E. F. Ferris; Judge Merritt, J. H. Bradbury; Barney Martin, Charles H. Phillips; Major Crumpton, Ed. Basson; Edward Foster, F. L. Dodge; Samuel Parsons, W. E. Douglass; Richard Waring, R. D. Warden; Robert Burkhardt, J. E. Coran; Thomas Houton, S. E. Dayton; Horton, Charles E. Hall; Rev. Dr. Apleton, Thomas Beauregard; Dick Leggett, grotesque dancer, and various entertainers, and in the "Grown-Up" act was applauded; the Sisters Vainmore, singers and acrobatic dancers, proved to be nimble footed performers; Kilroy and Dawson, parody singers and repartee producers, caused laughter in plenty by their original material; the Harvey Sisters, Maude and Edith, came next in songs and dances, for which they were encored; Frederick Clarence's School Girls and Boys Quartet (Madeline Burdette, Jean Neville, Walter Stockwell and Jack Cranz) sang and gave character imitations with good effect; Rexo and Ascan contributed a musical comedy sketch; The Irvin Brothers' Burlesques then dispensed themselves in the burlesque. PROCTOR'S PLEASURE PALACE.—The strong bill presented Oct. 4, for week, at this resort drew good crowds on the opening day and gave entire satisfaction all around. The Six Sisters Piccinelli, acrobats, made their first appearance at this house and performed many feats that won hearty applause. The performers are clever and earned the warm reception accorded them. The Northern Troop of Dancers, also new comers here, came in for a good share of applause. Pat Reilly, whose charcoal sketches long ago made him a vaudeville favorite of the first rank, now some cartoons of the people of the day, and was well received. The "Two Drifters," an exceedingly clever colored duo, entertained with their songs and dances and were among the top line favorites. Frank D. Bryan, with his popular parades, had no trouble in winning the favor of his audience, and the Deonzo Brothers, trick barrel jumpers, won much applause for their work. Enslie, the Sisters Lane and Sisters Fanchonetti provided the dancing portion of the programme, and all of them acquitted themselves well. The Three Gardner Brothers, in a musical act, and Little Dick's baton juggling gave entire satisfaction. Eddie and Ethel, the comedy act, were soon in favor. The Six Sisters Piccinelli, and Reilly & Wood's Company, in "The Walks of All Nations," closed the performance with a hurrah. The Sunday concert last week included Henry E. Dixey, Imogene Coemer, Pearl Andrews, Frank Moran, Almon and Dumond, and Lydia Hall.

THE UPTOWN BRANCH OF THE NATIONAL CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC.—An institution to encourage musical art in New York, was opened to the public Oct. 1. An entire building, No. 233 Lenox Avenue, has been fitted up for the purpose of the conservatory, and is especially designed for children and beginners with a special feature.

HUBER'S PALACE MUSEUM.—Manager Anderson presented a bill replete with novelty to admiring throngs Monday, Oct. 4, beginning what gives promise of being another week of prosperity. Enoch, the man-fish, has met with such favor that his retentio for another week was advisable; the Jeromes, aerial experts, will be another feature in the curio hall for this week. Ishmael, the Hindoo fakir, has attained popularity; Bondell, the fire king; Asbury and Robinson, plantation melodies; Captain Wesley Baker, the tattooed man, and a number of others also appear in the bill. An excellent specialty company appears. Among its members are included Ray Vaughn, serio comic; Parker and Retardo, specialty; Frank Shea, banjo artist; the Gleasons, European novelty; the Great Amann, the Sisters Rinaldo, Murray and McCoy, Irish comedians; the Dalys, the Fords and a number of others.

WALLACK'S.—The deservedly popular English player, E. S. Willard, began an engagement at this house Oct. 4, preliminary to another tour of this country. As his initial offering he gave the first American presentation of "The Physician," an original play, in four acts, by Henry Arthur Jones. This work was originally produced by Charles Wyndham and his company at the Criterion Theatre, London, Eng., on March 25 of the current year. In the first act we see the consulting room of Dr. Lewin Carey, in Cavendish Square, London. He is fashionable, wealthy and famous; a specialist who has acquired distinction by his treatment of nervous disorders. At the beginning of our acquaintance with him he is himself suffering from nervous excitement, and has sent for his friend, Dr. Brookner, a country practitioner, whom he sees in the second act. In the interview between the two men we learn that Dr. Carey had for seven years had intimate relations, by no means platonic, with Lady Valerie Camille, who had been deserted by her worthless husband. A feeling of enmity or the birth of a new passion, had caused her in turn to desert Dr. Carey, and life had suddenly lost its charm. Lady Valerie, after ignoring the beseeching letters sent her by her discarded lover, finally relents and calls upon him to say good bye. These parting words she speaks in spite of his passionate pleading, and the doctor is left alone. She has been gone but a few moments when he comes to consult the doctor concerning the health of one who is very dear to her. She is Miss Edana Hinde, the daughter of the Rev. Peregrine Hinde, Vicar of Fonteles, near Buxingham. The one whose failing health is the cause of her visit is her betrothed, Walter Amphiel, a prominent worker in the cause of temperance. She explains that Amphiel cannot be persuaded to seek medical advice, and begs Dr. Carey to come to Fonteles to see him, which he finally promises to do. After departure a gentleman calls for consultation. He is Walter Amphiel, but instead of a doctor he desires to consult him concerning a very dear friend who gives way to periodical fits of drunkenness, and whose craving for drink is so overwhelming that he would lie, steal or murder almost to get it. When thus afflicted he goes away and indulges in all sorts of debauchery. Amphiel is reality telling the story of his own wretched life, but gives the doctor no good reason to suspect the deceit. Edmund Hanno, the jolly bumbling knight, with no thought save that of quenching his thirst, was amusing, and Gustav Von Seyffertitz made a favorable impression as the count in search of the heiress. Wilhelmine Schlueter, who must have been highly gratified by her reception on her first entrance, contributed her usual careful work. Ruscha Michaels, as Ursel; Georg Le Bret, as Christof; Ely Collmer, as Friedl; and Agnes Burmester, as Countess Agnes, completed the cast. A number of new productions are under rehearsal and will be presented in their order. A season of comic opera will also be given.

HOYT'S THEATRE.—"A Proper Caper," an adaptation of MM. Billiaud, Barre and Hennequin's "Le Paradis," was given its first metropolitan production, in English, at this house Monday evening, Oct. 4, the first English presentation in this country having occurred Sept. 30, at the Hyperion Theatre, New Haven, Ct. It is a farce, in three acts, and although the name of the adapter does not appear on the programmes, it is generally believed to be the work of Henry Guy Carleton. The farce was first seen in this country March 25 of the current year, at the Irving Place Theatre, this city, where it was rendered in German, and was presented under the title of "Bocksprunge." Miss Hirshberger and Kratz being its adapters, and at that time the story appeared in our columns. In its German form it was first produced at the Neues Theatre, Berlin, Ger., Oct. 15, 1866. As "La Parade," it was originally produced April 3, 1869, at the Palais Royal, Paris, France. The story is one of the most Gallic farces that has been seen on the local stage for some time, and while it is filled with funny situations and is well nigh perfect in construction, it is doubtful if it will meet with any great degree of success in this country because it has been cut considerably. The work contains so much really bright material, so many funny situations and good character drawing, that it seems a pity that it should be permitted to contain objectionable lines and situations, which could be eliminated and not noticed, while their absence would improve the farce. The scenes between Casimir Beaujolais and Ninette, in the second act, become very offensive, and the nude picture incident in the first is most objectionable. While the farce depends for many of its complications upon this picture, the incident would be quite as forceful if the figure were draped, as it is the jealousy of the husband, Paul Tricot, for the artist who is supposed to have painted it is one of the main causes of the trouble. Suggestive lines and innuendos also occur, which on reflection do not enhance the merits of the work. Thomas Burns, as Casimir Beaujolais, was excellent, and would have won new laurels if his character had been less worthy of his efforts. Robert F. Culp, as Armand Vilagos, in a fiery tempered Hungarian, was clever, as usual. Kate Meek deserves praise for her work as Immortelle, wife of Casimir. Amelia Bingham made a lovely Ninette. The cast full: Casimir Beaujolais, Thomas Burns; Immortelle, Kate Meek; Ninehame, May E. Wood; Paul Tricot, Henry Bergman; Elise, Blanche Burton; Mme. Heloise Veuf, Alice Fischer; Robert Delangeville, Frank Doane; Achille, Richard Bennett; Prof. Zieglenleber, Charles Stanley; Arpad Vilagos, Robert F. Culp; Ninette, Amelia Bingham; Howard, Douglas Lloyd; Cache, Robert Jenkins; upholsterer, Frank Lea Short; Natalie Marion; Berg; Minna, Myra C. Brooks; Angele, Adele Kinney.

FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE.—Richard Mansfield presented on Oct. 4, as the initial offering of his season, a new work by George Bernard Shaw, called "The Devil's Disciple," a three act play fashioned on dramatic lines. In Harmanus Bleecker Hall, Albany, N. Y., on Oct. 1, the piece was originally performed, and its story can be found on another page of this issue. Mr. Shaw has now added a fourth act to the Mansfield version, and will have won new laurels if his character had been less worthy of his efforts. Robert F. Culp, as Armand Vilagos, in a fiery tempered Hungarian, was clever, as usual. Kate Meek deserves praise for her work as Immortelle, wife of Casimir. Amelia Bingham made a lovely Ninette. The cast full: Casimir Beaujolais, Thomas Burns; Immortelle, Kate Meek; Ninehame, May E. Wood; Paul Tricot, Henry Bergman; Elise, Blanche Burton; Mme. Heloise Veuf, Alice Fischer; Robert Delangeville, Frank Doane; Achille, Richard Bennett; Prof. Zieglenleber, Charles Stanley; Arpad Vilagos, Robert F. Culp; Ninette, Amelia Bingham; Howard, Douglas Lloyd; Cache, Robert Jenkins; upholsterer, Frank Lea Short; Natalie Marion; Berg; Minna, Myra C. Brooks; Angele, Adele Kinney.

KNICKERBOCKER THEATRE.—"In Town" began on Oct. 4 the fifth week of its run. It is still in high favor, notwithstanding those who delight in the products of the old country, but all who appreciate pretty stage pictures and a clever performance.

GARICK THEATRE.—Hoyt's "A Stranger in New York" entered on Oct. 4 upon the fourth week of its stay. It bears the impress of Mr. Hoyt's genius, and is consequently very entertaining and mirth provoking.

HERALD SQUARE THEATRE.—"The French Maid" began the second week of its run on Oct. 4. It has caught the popular fancy and is attracting good audiences. It seems to have good wearing qualities and is evidently destined for a lengthy run.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Maud Adams, now in the second week of her engagement in "The Little Minister," is playing to the capacity of the house. She is now firmly intrenched in her new stellar position, and is likely to become a popular idol.

HAMMERSTEIN'S OLYMPIA MUSIC HALL.—The bill for week of Oct. 4, was made up of a number of excellent specialty performers and "The Cat and the Cherub," which continued popular. The olio included: The Three Polos, bar act; Charles T. Aldrich, in his tramp specialty; the Lamont Trio, Stinson and Merton, in a comedy sketch; Robbins, trick bicycle rider; Cool and Clinton, female sharpshooters; and Signor Zani Quinto, baritone singer; and the soloist were Mrs. Stowe, Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. McLean, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Gandy, Miss Monk; Richard Dunton, Mr. Field; Christopher Dupee, Mr. Griffith; Uncle Tom's Cabin, Mr. Lefevre; Essie, Miss Briscoe; Lawyer Hawkins, Mr. Hunter; General Burgoyne, Mr. Frost; Major Swindon, Mr. Weaver; Rev. Mr. Brudenell; Mr. Courtney; a Sergeant, Mr. Kingdon.

WEBER & FIELDS' MUSIC HALL.—An evening of the local music hall stage occurred Oct. 4 at this resort, when Vesta Tilley made her reappearance in America, before an audience that literally packed the house. Few performers, on their third visit to this country, have been given the reception which was on Monday night extended to this clever performer, whom we have learned to know as the idol of London music halls. And, popular as she may be on the other side of the water, the enthusiasm which her reappearance aroused leads one to believe that her American consorts will be won over to her. The girl who gave the most pleasure was the young Miss Burnette, who had effected returns to her home, and upon her deathbed gives the name of her seducer, and thus Edana learns of this chapter in the life of her betrothed. Dr. Carey returns, but Amphiel is not with him. He has died upon the voyage, and Edana, who had resolved that their union was impossible because of what she had learned concerning his sins, is reconciled to the loss, and finds refuge in the arms and the heart of Dr. Carey. Mr. Jones has thought over his sins, given up his carefree life, and has given his skill as a master to the trade, and this will in some measure enhance his reputation, though it is by no means among the most interesting of his works. It shows too clearly the influence of Ibsen, and, in the effort to keep it in close touch with nature, he has made its lines severe, and almost totally neglected the aid of imagination and fancy. There is no poetry in it save that which is supplied by the legend of Saint Edana. The work is dangerously near to the region of problem plays, two subjects being presented which escape becoming problems only because of the author's skill in the use of his pen. The author's chief difficulty lies in the impossibility of expressing his opinions concerning the question of whether or not drunkenness can be cured, as it is often the result of disease. The experience of those who have conducted institutions for the reformation of habitual or periodical drunkards is that among the principal causes of habitual or periodical drunkenness are power and excessive egotism. The cure for these is not found in medical works. The happiest results in such cases are achieved when we cease to consider drunkenness as a disease and treat it as a moral evil, and give it the same treatment as we give to other sins. The author's method of dealing with the subject is to give a series of dancing steps which at times astonish the audience. Miss Burnette's endurance in performing a number of fancy clog steps was remarkable, and the team was heartily encored. "Bunco Bike" is the title of the afterpiece, and in this skit Harry Bryant was seen in his well known tramp costume. His partner was the girl who had been his victim. The boy was a tramp, and the girl a bunco player. His reception at the country hotel by the landlady and the seven girls was full of excitement, and a bed chamber scene had many possibilities, which were happily kept within the limit. W. B. Watson appeared as Smokey, a detective. Jeannette Dupree was Birdie, a vivacious French girl from Hoboken, and sang and danced befitting the occasion. Josie Gregory appeared to advantage as the General's son. The comedy work contributed by Joseph Mitchell, Joe Love and W. O'Rourke aided materially in the general effect. The incidental numbers included "The Sporting Duchess" song, "The Widow Brown," by Jeannette Dupree; "The Kaya Kaya Girls," a dreamy oriental movement, by a number of ladies, headed by Josie Gregory, in fetching costumes, an eccentric French song, by Jeannette Dupree; and a number of songs, and a sketch by Harry C. Bryan with Miss Burns upon the Hebrew square. The concluding medley was a rousing collection of songs, and the finish by Mr. Watson, in his Hebrew rag time selection, was repeatedly encored. Josie Gregory opened the olio, and made a hit with her songs. Her "I Want to Be Somebody's Darling" particularly caught on, and she was recalled. Harry Bryant appeared in a sketch with Mollie Phelps, and portrayed the efforts of a wandering Benedict to square accounts with his wife. Wilson and Massoney, two attractive singers and dancers, rendered a number of songs, and a second act, given as a solo recitation, was also a success. Bryant and Watson are proprietors, W. Watson, business manager; Frank S. Price, representative; Wm. Johnson, musical director; Joseph Love, stage manager; Grant Hoag, electrician; W. Mansfield, properties. Next week, the Merry Maidens Co.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE.—The week of Oct. 4 opened well at this house, and the excellent bill presented warranted the good business done. A series of living pictures were exhibited, and called for great enthusiasm from the audience. The performers are the Six Sisters Piccinelli, acrobats, made their first appearance at this house and performed many feats that won hearty applause. The performers are clever and earned the warm reception accorded them. The Northern Troop of Dancers, also new comers here, came in for a good share of applause. Pat Reilly, whose charcoal sketches long ago made him a vaudeville favorite of the first rank, now some cartoons of the people of the day, and was well received. The "Two Drifters," an exceedingly clever colored duo, entertained with their songs and dances and were among the top line favorites. Frank D. Bryan, with his popular parades, had no trouble in winning the favor of his audience, and the Deonzo Brothers, trick barrel jumpers, won much applause for their work. Enslie, the Sisters Lane and Sisters Fanchonetti provided the dancing portion of the programme, and all of them acquitted themselves well. The Three Gardner Brothers, in a musical act, and Little Dick's baton juggling gave entire satisfaction. Eddie and Ethel, the comedy act, were soon in favor. The Six Sisters Piccinelli, and Reilly & Wood's Company, in "The Walks of All Nations," closed the performance with a hurrah. The Sunday concert last week included Henry E. Dixey, Imogene Coemer, Pearl Andrews, Frank Moran, Almon and Dumond, and Lydia Hall.

TONY PASTOR'S THEATRE.—Here Lew Dockstader heads a solid delegation of performers who are bound by the unit rule of cleverness to support a platform of high grade amusement, which Manager Pastor long ago made his slogan. The convention of amusement enthusiasts, which overflowed the standing room early, found great delight in his good blackface dialogue, and also voted Pauline "Off the Road," entertainers worthy of applause. Welcomed royally was Cora Rout, a singer long in favor here, and her specialty was cheered vigorously. She started an indefinite engagement Oct. 4. "The First Quarrel," as expounded by Edgar Foreman and Juliet West, proved the happiest moments on the bill, their hit being deserved and pronounced, and John Canfield and Violet Carlton stirred the audience to applause by their artistic vocalisms and the comedy of Canfield. Their hit was likewise a notable feature of the night. Lancaster and Hall, respectively, gave an attractive and rather tame serio comic, and Wm. F. Donovan and John Roberts, exponents of the manly art, all reached prominence easily, when the measure of applause came in estimate. The Gregory Trio, Richard P. Murphy and Blanche Andrews, John and Anna Chick, and Woodville and Hall introduced specialties of greater or less degrees of merit, which found favor in accord with just deserts. Smith and Cook are one of next week's fixtures, with Cora Rout, Carrie Scott and the Seven Reed Birds as likely candidates for especial popularity.

MINER'S EIGHTH AVENUE THEATRE.—Rice & Barton's Rose Hill English Folly Co., direct from the Bowery, made its margin to the current week. The opening house, Monday, Oct. 4, was a big one, and the applause attested that this popular organization is still up to the standard.

STAR THEATRE.—Beginning the third week of their run, the Lilliputians packed this house Oct. 4.

ST. NICHOLAS MUSIC HALL.—The following performers are announced to appear at this house this week: Chas. B. Ward, Three Mange Bros., Don Len, Cliff Farrell, Gertrude Clemens, the Lavelles, the San Sets, and Irving and Sadie Jones.

NUGENT'S SUNDAY CONCERTS.—Weekly events are held at the Star Theatre, began Oct. 3, and a house packed to overflowing on the first plain story of Business Manager E. Nugent's popularity, and the wisdom of his plan for high grade Sunday night diversion. The bill was splendid, Henry E. Dixey, Lizzie Evans and Harry Mills, Bonnie Thornton, Laura Bennett, Will F. Denny, the Arnold Sisters, the Three Sisters Vanola, and Sidney Grant and Miss Norton forming a list of specialty people with a guaranteed reputation, which they all rigidly maintained, an evening of excellent amusement resulting. Jennie Yeamans will be the top sawyer next Sunday evening.

MANAGER JACK ROBINSON.—What Happened to Jones in the play sick from the Manhattan Hotel Monday, Oct. 4, had promised to give small flasks of whisky to men in the audience. Excuse Inspectors Gallagher and Boyce, however, stopped the giving away of liquor in the theatre. The management ingly amusing. Theresa Vaughan, as the maid-maid, is the life and soul of the piece. Among the other men of the company who attract attention were Catherine Martho, who personates the Spirit of Champagne in a new ballet, and Fred Solomon, in part of a dime museum manager. Next week Marie Dressler will appear in "The Girl of the Golden West." — Continued.

Broadway.—The triumph of action over words is strikingly illustrated in Lillian Lewis' new play, "For Liberty and Love," which was presented here, for the first time, before an audience that filled the theatre. The plot is the most dramatic, and situations authentically relate to being thrilling. The story revolves around the death of Macao, and the scenes and incidents are such as might have occurred in Cuba during the present disturbance. The play, in its rôle, gives an artistic performance next week. Next week Joseph Murphy will be seen in "Shean Rhue" and Jerry Murphy will be seen in "Shan Rhue."

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—At "Finney Ridge," a play which deals with the life of a man, which packed the house, the author, at the time of performance, and Director Hoffman has set the piece in keeping with the gossamer which has characterized the presentation of his predecessors. "The Club Men" deals with the trials in which the author, and those who get into various mudholes before they are straitened out. There are good parts for several members of the company, among them Miss Crossman, Howell Hansell, Edward Esmond, William Davidge, and others. The rôle of the company manager, played by a jester, is especially well done. The play is presented by a small company and has elaborate scenic effects. Next week, "The Scouting Duchess."

PARK.—Commening 4, the public will be given a week of "The Club Men," which pack the house. The author, who has tested the writing capacity of the drama, is by far the best. The management of the drama is by David Higgins, who plays the leading rôle of Jack Rose, and pictures life in the mountain regions of Kentucky. Although the piece the atmosphere of the drama is rather sombre, the play is presented by a small company and has elaborate scenic effects. Next week, "The Scouting Duchess."

HYDE & BEHMANN'S.—An excellent bill has been arranged here for this week. Crowded houses were the rule at the afternoon and evening performances given 4. The "Ghosts" in "The Merchant of Venice" and Miller Karpin in the clever character sketch, "A Queen Evening at Home," in this sketch Miss Bennett makes a fine quick change of character, and makes a decided hit with her audience. Original performers are Arthur Hause, John C. Hause, and others. The "Admiral and the Bell Boy," Ward and Curran, "The Chipper," Conway and Leland, the merry neophytes; Neil Waters, in rough Irish songs; Hodges and Lauchnane, double voices; St. John, James, and Regan in "The Merchant of Venice"; a Japanese dancer; Nellie Sibley, upon novel instruments, and Wills and Barron in a sketch, "The Insurance Agent." Tony Pastor's company will come here next week.

STANLEY.—At the Stanley, last night, the management here this week, opening with an afternoon and evening performance 4, before two large audiences. The curtain rises on a burlesque sketch entitled "Punch," in two rounds. The "Ghosts" and "The Merchant of Venice" have been well received from the press, and they have some new wrinkles in the dancing line.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—"The Prisoner of Zenda" comes 5, Wilbur Lucayke in "The Royal Society," 8.

GASTON.—At the Gaston, last night, "Burlesques" did good business last week. Irvin Brothers' Shows, has arrived from the southwest and is reported to be a success. His early arrival is due to the fever stricken South.

TROY.—At the Griswold Opera House, Besse Bonelli, in "Little Monte Cristo," drew good houses Sept. 27. "The Electrician" played to S. R. O. Oct. 2. "The Merchant of Venice" 4. "The Prisoner of Zenda" 6. Daniel Scully in "O'Brien's Contraband," 7-9.

RANDY'S OPERA HOUSE.—"The Secret Enemy" drew fairly well 1, 2. "The Prisoner of Zenda" comes 5, Wilbur Lucayke in "The Royal Society," 8.

SOLDIERS' HOME THEATRE.—"Other People's Money" was the attraction here, 29, to big business. Fitz and Webster, in "A Breezy Time," Oct. 8.

TOLEDO.—At the Grand Opera House, "In Gay New York" played to fair business Oct. 1, 2. Frank Daniels, in "The Eye," opens 4 for three nights' engagement.

PEOPLE'S THEATRE.—Murray and Mack, in "Finnigan's Courtship," closed three nights good business 2. "Shanahan's Sixth" opens 3 for four nights' engagement. Hallen's Prize Ideas come 7-9. "In Atlantic City" is booked 10-13. "The Heart of Chicago" 14-16.

ST. LOUIS.—At the City Opera House, The Sommer Comedy Co. gave six evening performances, to good houses, of Week of Sept. 27. Coming, "Other People's Money" Oct. 7. Rock's Players week of 11.

LONDON THEATRE.—New people week of 4 are: Carmann and Lucille Phillips, Nellie O'Connell and Mabel Ormond, the new stock.

HARRY M. KANE.—Kane has been secured as assistant manager of the Stanley. The company had been playing to good business since the season opened.

SYRACUSE.—At the Wieling Opera House, "The Man from Mexico" pleased large audiences Sept. 27, 28. "The Geisha" did well 29, 30. Madeline and the Magic Kiss," "came good business Oct. 1, 2. Booked: Henry Price in "Heartsease," 4; minstrels (amateur) 5. "The Princess" 6. "The Cat" 7. "Fox Fair" 8. "The Gondola" 9.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—"The Merchant of Venice" and "The Merchant of Venice" 10-12. The "Prisoner of Zenda" 13. "McFadden's Big Plan" 14.

UTICA.—At the Utica Opera House, Mark Smith's company presented "The Geisha," to a large audience, Sept. 28. "Under the Red Robe" followed and packed the house 29. New Plays.

"A Guilty Mother."

An emotional play, in five acts, by Arthur D. Hall, was given its first American production Sept. 27, at the Lyric Theatre, Hoboken, N. J. The story: Madeline, the wife of Paul Verri, is induced by Pietro Mandola, her husband's partner, to elope, and they go America, taking with them her child, Blanche. Mandola has also ruined his partner financially, and Verri follows the guilty pair to America. Madeline soon discovers that Mandola's stories about her husband's perfidy, which induced her to elope, were false. She bids him leave her, which he does, but takes the child with him. A lapse of fifteen years finds Mrs. Verri, under the assumed name of Madame Charles, earning a modest living in London. She is living with a Mrs. Rutland, whose son, Jack, is a detective. Verri, who is also in London, seeks out his daughter, and they are reunited. Dr. MacMorris secures the services of Jack Rutland to find his lost child. Madame Charles confesses her past lies to the Doctor, and she is really a mother. He cautions her to return, as he has no right to tell her to do so. While wandering on the docks one dark night, Jack Rutland rescues Gabrielle, a young girl, from drowning. She tells her story to Madame, Jack, and the Doctor. She was a maid in London, and a man, a young Englishman, Lord Cumberland, fell in love with her. They were married as she supposed, but afterwards discovered that the marriage was a mock one. Lord Cumberland had gone to England, to the bedside of a dying relative. She was five years before, and at last, in despair, she tried to take her own life. By means of a medallion portrait the fact is revealed that Gabrielle is Madeline, and that she is the daughter of a Frenchman. Pietro Mandola, under the name of Jean Castelli, is living in London, and with Cleo Duparc, an adventuress engaged in many nefarious schemes, among which is the robbery of valuable jewels from Mrs. Oakley. Before long, however, he is discovered, and he flees to France. Lord Cumberland and she write him a letter to meet her on the night of a ball at Oakley Towers, given in honor of a magnificent mirror, which Mayor Oakley has presented to him. The letter is received from Lord Cumberland, who is to meet her at the ball. When he arrives, he reveals himself, and threatens to tell her husband, but Mrs. Oakley deems him. In the heat of his passion he draws a pistol, also taken from Lord Cumberland, and shoots him dead. She then runs away to escape. Lord Cumberland, now dazed, has risen to see the reflection in the mirror, and thinks that he has committed the murder. Everything points to Lord Cumberland, but the murderer is he is arrested, and Gabrielle has learned that she loves him, and that their marriage was genuine. She is also convinced that he is innocent, and determines to prove him guiltless. This she finally does through the confession of Mercier, Mickey, and others. The trial is set for the next day, and while Castelli has discovered that Madeline Verri is in London, and he attempts to obtain money from her, she refuses, and a struggle ensues, during which a pistol drops from his pocket. Madame obtains possession of the gun, and it is discovered that it is loaded. She witnesses the shooting. Rutland and the doctor rush on Verri to find that it was he who fired the shot, to save that woman's honor. But he is arrested, but finally both he and Madeline are released. Madeline, however, is arrested in their stead. Madeline Verri, in despair at ever being able to obtain her husband's forgiveness, resolves to commit suicide. But just as she is about to drink the poison Verri dashes the glass from her hand, and has her drink it. She dies, but before her death Cyril Vassaroff, Carlton Wallis, Paul Verri, Harry L. Barker; Francesco Castelli, T. A. Wellington; John Nuttall, Fred Frost; Doctor MacMorrison, H. K. "A Puritan Romance,"

A comedy, in three acts, by Estelle Clayton, was given its first production on any stage Sept. 27, at the Lyceum Theatre, Elizabeth, N. J., by Miss Clayton, Isabelle Eversen and company. The play is derived from "Dorothy, the Puritan," a novel by August Campbell Watson. The story deals with the Puritans of Salem, Mass., in the year 1691, during the witchcraft persecutions, and involves the loves and trials of Dorothy, a Puritan maid, who is the niece and ward of Martha and David Holden, Puritans, and daughter of William Gray, a noted swash buckler in the army of Charles I. Aiden Wentworth, a prominent young man and a son of the church, comes to Salem to recruit a Puritan army. Dorothy has received a letter from her guardians, but when the position is made to her she pleads disconnection to marriage because of her youth and the position which would be hers, as a deacon's wife, if she married him. She is deeply interested in Sir Granville Lawrence, an English courier, who promises her high honors at court if she will consent to fly with him back to England. Her refusal to marry Wentworth brings on her chagrin, and she is compelled to flee to Boston, where she decides to elope with him. In the flight to Boston she is abandoned by Sir Granville, and for six weeks she wanders alone in the woods. She meets Trusman, an old woman supposed by the villagers to be a witch. Dorothy finally recovers, and returns to the home of her guardians stealthily, by night, and is joyfully received by them, believing her to have perished. They are unable to keep secret their joy, and she has a bairn. The change of heart, now loves Aiden Wentworth in return. Wentworth still loves her, and urges a speedy marriage. Elizabeth Hubbard, a kindly old woman, who has been sent to the home of Dorothy, succeeds in preventing Dorothy's escape with Sir Granville, and her long stay in the care of Goody Fruehman, while ill, but her efforts prove of no avail with Wentworth. The marriage takes place, during the winter, in Salem, in the presence of the Puritans against the supposed witches, who convey Misses Trueman to Hille to be executed. Dorothy, in gratitude to her for her care, endeavors to make amends for her sins, and is tried for heresy, and condemned to death. She is condemned by the excited villagers and denounced also as a witch. Death seemed inevitable to both, when a pardon for all those in Salem accused of witchcraft was issued by the Governor of Massachusetts, and Dorothy and Aiden are happily united. The cast: Aiden Wentworth, W. H. Elwood; Sir Granville; Lawrence Myron Calice; David Holden, A. C. Delwin; Temperance Kisan; Mrs. Holden; Rev. Mr. Edward; John Pender; Take Little; Edna; Mrs. Woe-Hegone Peter; Henry Sammis; Dorothy Grey; Isabelle Eversen; Elizabeth Hubbard; Grace Huntington; Martha Holden; Virginia Buchanan; Henrietta Economy; Van Pintel; Helen; Estelle Clayton; Mrs. purity; Hobson; Imogene Shultz; Utilia; Augusta Durbin; Edith Eustace; Fannie Hunt; Goody Fruehman; Imogene Eberle.

"Mr. Beans from Boston,"

A farce comedy, in three acts, from the pen of James Gorman, was given its first production on any stage Aug. 23, at the Opera House, Plainfield, N. J., by the three Gorman Bros. and company. The play opens in New York City, at the office of Humphrey Miggs, a capitalist, who deserted his wife in Calcutta, India, ten years previous to the opening of the story, and died to this country. Sylvester Beane, from Boston, an impudent inventor of a flying machine, and his partner, Chauncey Maguiness, a good natured Irish "hob," are driven into Miggs' office by a heavy thunderstorm. While Beane tries to interest Miggs in his invention, Miggs' son, Timmy, comes to the office to collect the sum he furnished the two partners with pocket money and takes them to his boarding house, kept by Mrs. Flitter. Where they are given rooms. Miggs, who has been informed by his attorney that his wife died in Calcutta two years previous to his arrival, is greatly grieved, and, in the lassitude, but she does not fancy his attentions. She and George Smithers, another of her mother's boarders, are in love. But in spite of herself she is forced into an engagement with Miggs. To help him out of his predicament, he hires several vaudeville performers to amuse his guests. While they are rehearsing, in the parlors at the boarding house, he and his daughter have overheard the conversation between father and daughter on the night of the murder. The old man is arrested on the charge of being a murderer. The old man, the judge, and the excited villagers and denounces also as a witch. Death seemed inevitable to both, when a pardon for all those in Salem accused of witchcraft was issued by the Governor of Massachusetts, and Dorothy and Aiden are happily united. The cast: Aiden Wentworth, W. H. Elwood; Sir Granville; Lawrence Myron Calice; David Holden, A. C. Delwin; Temperance Kisan; Mrs. Holden; Rev. "My Wife's Step Husband,"

A farcical comedy, in three acts, by H. A. Du Souchet, was produced for the first time in America Sept. 14, at the Fountain Hill Opera House, Bethlehem, Pa. It was given its first production on any stage Sept. 13, in London, Eng., for copyright purposes. The story: Le Flite is in love with Charles Eyck, but is forced by her mother, Madame Dupont, to engage herself in marriage to Anatole Bourchet, who on the eve of his wedding gives a farewell bachelor supper to his friends at a fashionable club in New Orleans, where the scene is laid. In a dark hallway in the clubhouse he has an encounter with Alphonse McCracken, a councilor for Mayor. They exchange cards in order to arrange for a duel, but instead of his own card Anatole gives that of D'Abigny, a famous French duellist, who has just arrived in New Orleans with a well-authenticated record of having killed seven men in duels. McCracken is terrified at this, and when Anatole and Viola are brought before him next day by Madame Dupont to be married he is so excited, and there is so much confusion in his office, that he makes up a story that he has been a widower for twelve years, instead of to her daughter, and the mistake is not discovered till after Anatole has left the office with his supposed bride. Viola, when Madame Dupont is overjoyed to find that she is at last rid of Anatole, has come to see him again. A lapse of fifteen years finds Mrs. Verri, under the assumed name of Madame Charles, earning a modest living in London. She is living with a Mrs. Rutland, whose son, Jack, is a detective. "The Master of Ceremonies,"

A dramatization, in four acts, of George Manville Fenn's novel of the same name, was given its first production on any stage Aug. 30, at Halifax, N. S., by Lewis Morrison and company. As a number of parties have taken a hand at the adaptation the whole credit can be given to none. The time is during the reign of George III, and the place is Saltoun, England. Stuart Denville, the Master of Ceremonies, is a poor and very proud gentleman, whose struggle to keep up appearances, and his position in society, are very similar to those of Fred Astaire, and to make both of them look like the proverbial oil and water. Fred, who is given to displaying and excesses of all kinds; Morton, whose constant complaint is shame of their impoverished condition, and Claire, the old man's pride and his hope, for her marriage is the family to be raised to position and affluence. Lady Teigne, a gentlewoman with an irascible temper and many diamonds, has apart from her husband, a son, a young man, who is the heir to the house with Major Rockwell, of the dragons; Richard Linnell, a young barrister, who is the secret lover of Claire, and Lord Carburo, a Justice of the Peace Court. The latter is an open suitor for the daughter's hand, and thus becomes the cause of a great deal of trouble. The Major, a rascal and gambler, also wishes to win her. The son, Fred, in a drunken fit of shame and despondency, accepts the proverbial "shilling," and is led to believe that the rank of Rockwell's wife, by whom he is detailed to him, is that of a count. One evening, while visiting at the Denvilles, the major sees Lady Teigne's magnificent diamonds, and, being in great need of money, determines to secure them. He sends for his servant, Fred Denville, who has enlisted under the name of James Bell, that he is going to a masquerade ball, and borrows his servant's uniform. While Fred is away, he is forced to kill his master, and goes down with the kinfe he found in the pocket of the uniform. As he comes from the lady's apartments he encounters Mr. Denville; the old man grapples with the thief, a struggle ensues, the old man is thrown, and the thief runs off. The old man recognizes the uniform of a private soldier, thinks he recognizes his own son as the thief, picks up the knife and is confirmed in the belief. Hurrying to the room occupied by Lady Teigne, he finds her dead. The old man recognizes the uniform of a private soldier, thinks he recognizes his own son as the thief, picks up the knife and is confirmed in the belief. Hurrying to the room occupied by Lady Teigne, he finds her dead. Fred, who is given to displaying and excesses of all kinds; Morton, whose constant complaint is shame of their impoverished condition, and Claire, the old man's pride and his hope, for her marriage is the family to be raised to position and affluence. Lady Teigne, a gentlewoman with an irascible temper and many diamonds, has apart from her husband, a son, a young man, who is the heir to the house with Major Rockwell, of the dragons; Richard Linnell, a young barrister, who is the secret lover of Claire, and Lord Carburo, a Justice of the Peace Court. The latter is an open suitor for the daughter's hand, and thus becomes the cause of a great deal of trouble. The Major, a rascal and gambler, also wishes to win her. The son, Fred, in a drunken fit of shame and despondency, accepts the proverbial "shilling," and is led to believe that the rank of Rockwell's wife, by whom he is detailed to him, is that of a count. One evening, while visiting at the Denvilles, the major sees Lady Teigne's magnificent diamonds, and, being in great need of money, determines to secure them. He sends for his servant, Fred Denville, who has enlisted under the name of James Bell, that he is going to a masquerade ball, and borrows his servant's uniform. While Fred is away, he is forced to kill his master, and goes down with the kinfe he found in the pocket of the uniform. As he comes from the lady's apartments he encounters Mr. Denville; the old man grapples with the thief, a struggle ensues, the old man is thrown, and the thief runs off. THEATRICAL.

INQUIRIES.—We cannot find any record of the production of this play, and it is suggested that it was never produced, nor that it was ever called "The Apostate," although that would have been an appropriate title. Mr. Gottold produced the play under its original title, "Virtuous Action," which opened at the Boston Opera House, Dec. 30, 1884. The version we read was translation from the German of Karl Gutkow, by Otto Petzler. We know of no other translation of the work, nor can we inform you whether or not it was ever published. Adolph Sonnenfeld produced it at the Thalia Theatre, this city, March 9, 1885.

E. J. Fort Wayne.—It is clearly not necessary to obtain an injunction restraining the unauthorised presentation of a play, or one not constituting an unlawful infringement of the rights of the author. The cause of action lies in the making of piracy a misdemeanor; or the substantive clause, concerning injunctions and the scope of their operation, is contained in the practice of the right owner of the play by hindering its complete performance. For his own protection, however, the owner of the play should make application for an injunction against his piratical competitors.

Mrs. N. M. Hamilton.—Address the party in our care and we will advertise the letter.

C. D. Hamilton.—We make no record of amateur performances, and have no knowledge of the travesty to which you refer.

F. C. Lawrence.—Twenty five thousand. 2. We cannot advise you concerning the painting of the clubs.

W. R. Fitchbury.—The song "Silent Threads Among the Stars" was copyrighted and published in 1873.

E. G. Wilmet.—From twenty to twenty-five dollars per week.

T. C. A. Utica.—To the Librarian of Congress, Washington, D. C. Mail address. Library of Congress books are subject to seizure on the exertion of the right of search of the hands, such as painting, sculpture, architecture, music, etc. They are more closely allied to luxury than to the necessities of living.

TAPIO.—Neither of the parties are Indians.

W. C. P., Springfield.—We know of no company of that name.

J. L. O. M. Vernon.—1. We keep no record of matters of that sort. 3. We do not know what engagements he has made.

A. L. Oklahoma.—Address the party in our care.

J. J. M. Bridgeport.—It is well known to us that you were strong enough to secure for you an engagement at any price.

J. M. H. Hoboken.—The show has closed its season. We do not know who owned it.

D. L. S. DuBois.—Address letter in care of THE CLIPPER.

J. O. Sioux City.—We do not know the poem.

J. R. Hartford.—Send two copies of your sketch with printed or typewritten signature, together with the name of the Librarian of Congress, Washington, D. C.

J. P.—We do not know where the parties will be upon the dates you mention. Address letter in care of THE CLIPPER.

H. A. E. Dover.—Advertise your wants in THE CLIPPER at rates at head of this column.

M. A. Chicago.—The whereabouts of the party is unknown to us. Address letter in our care, and we will advise it.

J. J. Buffalo.—1. You must not give any performance of the play before securing copyright. 2. It is necessary to have both title and play copyrighted. 3. The play may be sent in writing, but the title pages must be either printed or type written. 4. The fee is one dollar.

G. P. S.—From thirty-five to fifty dollars per week.

2. From fifteen to twenty dollars per week.

J. C. Chicago.—We do not recall the title of the song. It was written by George Fuller Goldfarb. Address any of our publishing advertisers. 2. The "ad" would cost one dollar.

C. C.—The "ad" would cost one dollar.

J. R. San Diego.—To B. C. Colt & Co., 115 Nassau Street, this city.

J. R. Philadelphia.—Address E. R. Street, 351 Main Street, Hartford, Ct.

J. J. San Andreas.—We never made any record of the report.

W. D. Worcester.—We never advise any one to go upon the stage. We can no way assist you in obtaining an engagement, and we advise you to seek some other start in life.

J. Baltimore.—The whereabouts of the party is unknown to us. Address letter in our care and we will advise it.

M. Montreal.—Address a letter to the party in care of THE CLIPPER.

W. B. London.—1. From twenty dollars per week upwards. 2. There is a fair demand. 3. Advertising in THE CLIPPER. The "ad" would cost $4.20 for three insertions. 5. The party is on the road. He carries with him open performances.

M. A. Grand Rapids.—1. He has. 2. See "Baseball" queries.

CARDS.

T. J. B. Dois.—1. Having opened the pot falsely, As he was in the lead, he took the amount of the ante, and the amount of the other mutually agreed upon (penalty), which goes to the next pot, and he is debarrased from playing again for the jack pot in which the error occurred. Of the others who stayed in, the player who had the best hand, and the dealer announces that he will give one or run the cards to another trump.

W. H. S. Nile.—C being without suit or trump, the card he should remain where it is.

J. Tam.—A, having made a play, the two points he had left, of course wins the game. His high outranked B's low. It made no difference that the latter made jack before A got game.

A. F. Memphis.—Although your opponent made in the three points he had, as did he but one point, and played high, you win the game, high outranking low, jack, game. The fact that your opponent made his three did not give him precedence in counting, as he had three in play he could not have counted anything. High always takes precedence of all other points in the count.

SUBSCRIBER, Nasbua.—C is wrong, if his opponents made in play what they bid, his low, being outranked by the three points he had, as did he but one point, and played high, you win the game, high outranking low, jack, game. The fact that your opponent made his three did not give him precedence in counting, as he had three in play he could not have counted anything. High always takes precedence of all other points in the count.

S. W. Boston.—No; only two points can be claimed for a euchre, no matter whether the hand sundered is played alone or not.

J. C. Scranton.—A hand composed of five, four, three, deuce and ace, all of the same suit, constitutes a "royal" flush, just the same as though it was made up of ace, king, queen, knave and ten spot, the only difference being in the respective value of the hands.

F. K.—There is some mistake here in the score. "But the mistake" does not make any difference in the actual playing out of the game."—C. H. Tim.

B. M. C. McDonald.—The player who held high won the game, that pointing outranking low, jack and game.

BASEBALL, CRICKET, ETC.

J. P. R. Toronto.—The umpire should declare it a bunt, as the base runners were entitled to the ball, and the bases without being put out. The ball had been returned to and held by the pitcher standing in his position.

A. J. D. Philadelphia.—The batsman at the bowler's wicket being out of his ground before actual delivery of the ball, the said bowler may run him out.

C. W. D. Portland.—He was born July 10, 1857.

M. A. C. Grand Rapids.—The official averages of that league have not been issued yet, and that is the only correct way of finding out.

AQUATIC.

G. C. E. Allegheny.—The first international sculling matches between American and English champions were those between Jimmy Hamill, the American champion, and Harry Kilrain, the English champion, which took place on the River Tyne, Eng., July 4, 1866.

Twenty cents per line, agate type measure; space of one inch, $2.50 each insertion. A deduction of 20 per cent. is allowed on advertisements when paid for three months in advance, and on advertisements measuring 100 lines or more.

If you Kt-B 3 or K or K 3, Black would have made in two moves—a little problem for the student.

(19) K to R 4 was obviously better.

(5) An overhand which loses off hand, Kt to K B 3 was the correct move.

The father of John C. Chapman, the veteran player and manager, died Sept. 24, at his residence, 1924 Lexington Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., aged nearly eighty-eight years. A funeral service was held at his late residence on Sept. 26, and the Rev. Charles R. Baker, rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Messiah, of which Mr. Chapman was a communicant, officiated. The interment was in Greenwood.

Joseph Donnegan, once well known as a player and umpire, died recently in this city. Old time enthusiasts will remember "Joe," as he was familiarly known as the catcher of the Alaskans when they held the championship of the country. Later he became a W. H. Barnes and Springfield team, and afterward succeeded Umpire Dick Higham when the latter was suspended. Donnegan bailed from the Eighth Ward, and his funeral, which was held on Sept. 28, was largely attended. Most of the old players present were Joseph Hanlon, Charley Jones, William Taylor, James Sullivan, Eddie Kennedy, William Quinn, Jerry Sullivan, John Kelly, Mike Lehane, Johnny Troy, Sam Crane, Joe Gerhardt, Harry Calahan, Jack Lynch, Shorty Howe, Jack Hayes and Jimmy Clinton.

Cricket.

THE NEW JERSEY ATHLETIC CLUB won the championship of the Metropolitan District League for the second time in succession without defeat. Sixteen games in all were won, two lost and four drawn. G. C. Clarke led the team in batting, with an average of .55.37 runs, scoring in championship contests: 145, not out, 120, not out, 100, not out; F. G. Ford, N. F. Druse, W. Gunn, W. G. Grace and G. J. Jackson also accomplished the feat four times. F. G. J. Ford, N. F. Druse and A. C. MacLaren lead in batting in first class matches, each having an average of over .500. Abel scored a total of 21.96 runs, and T. Richardson, 20.71 runs, both averages, but T. Richardson has proved the most successful bowler during the past season, taking a total of two hundred and seventy-three wickets.

THE CONCLUDING CONTEST between the Pacific and the Golden State, Cal., took place Sept. 12 at Golden Gate, Cal., and resulted in a victory for the former by a score of 222 for eight wickets to 64. C. P. Coles was again the highest scorer for the Pacific eleven, getting 71 in last-innings before he was retired. J. D. Richardson, 49, of the Golden State, bowled 100 for the first wicket, and T. Richardson, 100 for the second, on a doubtful decision. The inning was decided closed at the fall of the eighth wicket. F. Sewell's underhand bowling completely puzzled the Bohemian team, he taking seven wickets in three runs. E. G. Siomian, with 22, was the highest scorer for the home team. A second inning was commenced, in which the Bohemian team scored 51 for four wickets.

THE CONCLUDING CHAMPIONSHIP CONTEST between the Pacific and the California Club, of the California Association, took place Sept. 13 at Alameda, Calif., and resulted in a victory for the former by a score of 267 for seven wickets to 109, the totals of the first inning. A. Dickinson, the captain of the Pacific eleven, scored 156 in faultless form, and was the leading batsman. He got 100 for the first wicket, and 100 for the third wicket. Dickinson made an effort to side the ground for five each, and also made eleven 4's. J. H. Spire scored 32, not out, for the Alameda eleven. J. Theobald, of the Pacific club, bowled the last two wickets in three runs, and A. Dickinson took three wickets for 25 runs.

G. H. CLARK, of the New Jersey Athletic Club, has the best batting average in the championship games of the Metropolitan District League, having scored a total of 388 runs in seven innings, being three times not out. He made 145, not out, against the New York Club. M. R. Cobb, of the New Jersey Athletic Club, has the best bowling average in League championship contests, capturing thirty-two wickets at a cost of 213 runs. His most noteworthy feat was the taking of six wickets of the Manhattan team in 15 runs, and A. Dickinson bowled three wickets for 25 runs.

THE KEARNY CLUB defeated the Roselle Club, after an exciting finish, by a score of 40 to 35, in an one inning game, Sept. 11, at East Orange, N. J. The result was mainly due to the good bowling of A. Rice, who took five wickets in one over, and for three runs, the other five were taken by T. O'Farrell. T. O'Farrell, who bowled 100 for the first wicket, the Kearny Club concluded its season Sept. 18, when twelve contended against twenty-four business men of Kearny, and won by 7 to 7 in the final game.

A COMPETITION took place Sept. 25, at Pullman, Ill., an eleven of the St. George and Wandsworth Clubs playing against an eleven of the Pullman and Chicago Clubs. J. Davis scored 79, not out, and F. S. Beddoe made 100, of a total of 185 for eight wickets credited to the same team. The Pullman team, however, maintained for the second wicket. The Pullman team made 53 for two wickets, E. R. Wilton scoring 26, not out, and the contest ended in a draw.

W. R. SWADWORTH, of the Toronto (Ont.) Club, played for the St. George eleven against the Chicago team, Sept. 18, at Chicago, Ill., and won by 10 to 9, the time in that city, the remarkable feat of clean bowling all of the ten wickets in the inning, at the cost of only 26 runs. The St. George team won by a score of 86 to 74, in the first inning. W. H. Doe, with 23, and G. Tolley, with 24, not out, were the highest scorers for their respective teams.

A TEAM of English cricketers, including A. E. Stoddart, K. S. Ranjitsingh, N. F. Druse, J. R. Mason, J. T. Hearne, Richard, Hayward, Wainwright, Hirsh, Briggs, Storer and others, who had sold two weeks before, completes the team, which will play a series of games, including five test contests with the strongest eleven that can be selected to represent Australia.

A. E. Trott, the well known Australian cricketer, who has been engaged as one of the bowlers of the Marylebone Club, of London Eng., during the past two seasons, has secured an engagement in South Africa during the Winter months. He will be qualified by experience to play for the Rhodesians in May next, and will return from South Africa in ample time for the county championship contests.

IN THE CHAMPIONSHIP GAMES of the New York Association series G. Glittens, of the New York Athletic Club, has the best batting average, scoring a total of 370 runs, and Joseph Werner third, 260, 2m. 12s.

George F. Gilpatrick, the able young pitcher, whose release President Von der Ahe, of the St. Louis Browns, tried to purchase two weeks before the San Antonio Club, of the Texas League, disbanded, is generally conceded by impartial critics to be one of the crack pitchers of the Lone Star State League; at least, he stood well up among the leading pitchers of that league during the season just closed, winning twenty-seven out of thirty-two games in the pitcher's position. He was born on Feb. 28, 1892, at Holden, Johnson Co., Mo., and learned to play ball at an early age at his native place. His first engagement was with the semi-professional team at Fort Smith, Ark., and he did so well that he was soon engaged by the association of the management of the Sherman Club, of the Texas League, who made him a liberal offer for the season of 1892, which he accepted, and during that season participated in forty-eight championship games, in thirty-three of which he filled the pitcher's position. In 1893 he signed with the Richmond Club, of the Virginia League, and after participating in sixteen championship games sickness compelled him to lay off for the rest of that season. When he was able to get around again he went to the Hot Springs, in Arkansas, to recuperate, and while there he signed with the San Antonio Club, of the Texas League, for the season of 1897. Some of his best pitching performances while connected with the Richmond Club were as follows: On May 29, 1892, at Richmond, Va., the locals defeated the Roanokes by 4 to 2, the losers making only three safe hits. On May 30, 1892, at Roanoke, Va., the Roanokes beat the Norfolk team by 4 to 3, the Roanokes hitting six safe hits, the former won by 2 to 1. His best pitching feat was in the morning game of June 30, at Richmond, when he allowed the Roanokes only two safe hits, the Richmonds winning by 7 to 1.

A LIFE TIME'S CHANCE TO MAKE A FORTUNE QUICK.

The Greatest Money Making Machine and Novelty Attraction in the World.

THE STEAM CIRCULAR VENETIAN GONDOLAS.

A VERITABLE DREAM IN ORNATE CARVING AND GOLD.
THE MOST FASCINATING AMUSEMENT KNOWN.

AN IDEAL OPPORTUNITY FOR ELECTRIC RAILWAY COMPANY, AMUSEMENT SYNDICATE OR PRIVATE INDIVIDUAL TO Secure this Mechanical Triumph at a Bargain.

As high as $1,000 in one day has been made by present owner, who, on account of ill health, wishes to retire from the business. The machine is nearly new, and has no rival in America. It is the most elaborate in its fitting and decorations of anything ever constructed for public recreation, and possesses an attraction for amusement seekers that nothing else in the world can boast of. Fully provided with every requisite possible, including the best steam engine and electric light plant ever made. We have packed in five compartments more elegant and requires three flat cars to carry it. It wagon specially constructed and provided with every appointment necessary for care and protection, including elegant living car. Every privilege granted for investigation before purchasing. It is easy to build up, which can be done in one day, and taken down in seven hours. Further particulars, actual photograph, etc., furnished upon application to

GREATEST BARGAIN EVER OFFERED.

CONTINUED FOR ONE WEEK LONGER.

CINEOGRAPH, IN COMPLETE RUNNING ORDER,

AND

4 FILMS FREE

All for $75.00.

IMPORTANT.

My intention being to lend all possible assistance to prospective Showmen, I will sell one dozen Cineographs in different States as an inducement for one week only, as follows: ONE NEW IMPROVED PORTABLE CINEOGRAPH, THE GREATEST LIFE MOTION MACHINE EVER PRODUCED, in complete running order, consisting of Adjustable Cast Iron Stand, Electric and Calcium Light Lamps, Condenser, Objective Lens and Rheostat, weight, over all, about 50 pounds. Also 4 new films of your own selection, each 50 feet long and of the latest subjects, Edison's or any other make, for $75.00.

You can use an oil lamp with the Cineograph, which will reduce the price about $25.00; but I do not consider them practical and consequently do not recommend them.

Look Out for So Called Original Films. MINE ARE ORIGINAL.

I sell no others but Standard Films and EVERYONE IS ORIGINAL. At least 1,000 films constantly on hand of the following makes: Thomas Edison, A. Lumiere & Sons, of Lyons, France, and Pathé Frères, at Paris, France.
